

CROWNING CRIME OF THE CENTURY.

The Conviction of Dreyfus by the Most Partial Court of the World's History.

SOME VERY AFFECTING SCENES

In Court When the Verdict Was Announced—Strong Men Shed Many Tears Over It.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A special dispatch from Berlin says:

"It is now permitted to be known that the war office holds documents conclusively proving that Esterhazy and Henry betrayed their trusts, and only the permission of Emperor William is awaited for the publication of documents showing the sentence of Dreyfus to be a brutal act of injustice."

RENNES, Sept. 10.—The expected has happened. Dreyfus has been condemned, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. Though a majority of those in the court room on yesterday, fully expected the verdict, they were completely stupefied when it was given, and the silence which prevailed in the room and the way men turned pale and caught their breaths was more impressive than any other manifestation could have been.

Maitre Demange sank back in his chair, and tears trickled down his cheeks, and Maitre Labori turned white as a sheet while all around the court room men looked at each other in silence. Positively the only sound to be heard was the rustling of papers from the reporters' bench, as each press representative tried to be first to send the news.

As the audience left the court room fully ten or fifteen men were crying openly, and the majority of them present walked quietly down the street for more than a block without speaking a word. It was like a funeral procession. Meanwhile a tragedy was being enacted in the little room off from the court room, where Dreyfus listened to the reading of the verdict. He had been told the result by his lawyers, and wept bitterly, but when in the presence of the officials of the court martial, he listened impassively to the sentence.

His wife, who was waiting in torture and suspense at her house, bore the news bravely, and when visiting her husband in the afternoon showed the onlookers who were in the streets no sign of her suffering as she walked from her carriage to the prison.

Mathieu Dreyfus was not present in court in the afternoon, but visited his brother after the verdict had been rendered. He found him perfectly calm, and without any manifestation of surprise at the finding of the court. The prisoner simply shrugged his shoulders, uttering an expressive "Bah!", adding, as he embraced his brother as the latter was preparing to leave, "Console my wife."

The general belief is that Dreyfus will be pardoned; but this will not satisfy his friends, who vehemently declare that they will refuse to accept the verdict, and will continue the battle until the judgment is reversed. The verdict, they say, is directed more against the Jews than against Dreyfus, and, if allowed to stand, will make their existence in France impossible. Maitre Labori and Maitre Demange took the midnight train to Paris. They drove to the station in a closed carriage, escorted by four mounted gendarmes. The road was practically deserted, and no demonstration occurred en route or at the station. Maitre Demange and Maitre Labori will tomorrow sign an application for a revision of the case, although there is no hope that the verdict will be reversed. Both are much upset, though it can hardly be said that they are surprised.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The boulevard last evening presented an animated scene, but on the whole the Rennes verdict was calmly discussed. After dinner crowds collected in front of the offices of the Libre Parole, which were illuminated with cheap Venetian lanterns.

A number of fellows in a neighboring cafe started to sing the Marseillaise, and then formed a procession, which the police soon dispersed, and the leaders of which were arrested and taken to the station. By 11 o'clock the boulevards were deserted.

The representative of the Associated Press here learns on good authority that one of the members of the cabinet to-day told a friend that Dreyfus probably would not have to undergo further imprisonment, and that if that he was sent to prison his place of confinement would probably be the island of St. Marguerite, near Cannes, where Marshal Bismarck was incarcerated, and thence he escaped.

M. Clemenceau, in the Aurore, says Colonel Jouan's object was to save the general staff, and that between

Black Satin Walking Gown From Harper's Bazar.

The new black gowns bid fair to outshine colored street gowns in popularity. The new extremes of severe simplicity and elaborate applied trimmings will be seen in these costumes, whether made of satin-finished cloths or of satin itself. A model of the first-named variety, illustrated on this page, is made with a close sheath skirt, fitting smoothly about the hips, but with a decided spring outward in the lower part of the skirt, to which is added a flaring ruffle, smoothly applied, under a succession of rows of machine stitching. The skirt pattern, as issued, is made in two pieces, one for the upper skirt and the second for the ruffle, with lines of perforations to indicate the shape of the front and side broadens where the material employed is to be of narrow-width silk. The ruffle should have an interlining of crinoline. The Eton

Jacket is made with stretched, seamless back, side or under-arm gore and front, the latter fitted to the form by a single dart on each side. Large reverses—those in the original model are of plain silk, with stitched edges—and small gilt buttons form the sole trimming of this garment, which meets but does not lap down the centre of the front. Here it is secured by hooks and eyes. The sleeves are smoothly fitted into the arm's-eye, and fit the arm closely to the wrist, where they are trimmed with single rows of gilt buttons similar to those used for the centre front.

Fourteen yards of narrow-width material, such as satin, peau de sole, bengaline, or other silk, will be required to make this costume as shown in the illustration. Of satin-faced cloth fifty-four inches wide, six and one-half yards will prove sufficient.

at the end of the act, when he suddenly bolts on the stage. For a moment the audience did not understand the significance of the broadcloth and the gold face. Then, suddenly, somebody hissed. Other mild hisses followed from different parts of the theatre. For the moment, the actor thought they were directed at him personally, and he hesitated, while his face turned as red as his trousers.

The next moment a deep voice cried: "Shame on the army! Shame on France!" And the cause of the hissing became generally understood.

THE TEST THAT TELLS.

You can get all the Convincing Proof you Want by Reading Wheeling Papers.

When the reader wants any article of value, he naturally prefers to deal with someone he can depend upon.

The test that tells the tale of merit is the test of friends and neighbors.

Wheeling people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

Can you ask for better evidence? Read this case:

Mr. Henry Norton, of No. 315 Eoff street, employed at the Le Belle iron works, says: "For two or three years my kidneys and back hurt me with a dull, aching pain across the loins. A distressing urinary weakness accompanied it, and I suffered from indigestion and irregular appetite, and often felt generally used up. Many a time I worked when I felt more going home. Notices of Doan's Kidney Pills appeared in the papers, and I thought, 'they might do me good, so I got a box at the Logan Drug Company. It went to the right spot, and did me more good than all the other remedies I had taken put together.'"

Kentucky Fend Revived.

LONDON, Ky., Sept. 8.—Trouble in the Everole-French feud in Perry county has broken out again. Tuesday night at Hazard there was quite a gathering of Everoles and McComb on one side and Fields and French on the other. Bad feelings were followed by shooting. It soon became general and Phil McComb was killed by one of the Fields. The side that did the killing dispersed. Perry is two counties further back in the mountains than Clay.

SCHOOL MELANGE.

Again the pedagogue appears in the columns of the Intelligencer and for another year will try to give items of interest concerning our schools. The only object he has in writing these notes is to assist our already efficient schools to become more efficient. As our people know more about our schools they become more interested in them, and just in proportion as they become more interested they will seek to know more about them. This will cause a better understanding between parents and teachers, which will have the effect to make our schools better. We are in the habit of saying, "Like teacher, like school," which is true in a sense, but in the broadest sense the success of any school depends upon teacher, pupil and parent. But especially must there be the hearty co-operation of the parent to insure perfect success. Let the parents then strive to know all they can about our schools. They have a right to know how their children are being taught, and they should exercise the right by going to the school and assisting the teacher in every way possible.

The Wheeling teachers' institute was a great success. The instruction given was along the lines of the most advanced thought on the subject of popular education. Profs. Gilbert and Noss both stand away up in the profession, and they are willing to give their best thoughts to assist the teachers who are striving to prepare themselves to teach rather than to keep school. We have too much keeping school at the present time, and some of that is very poor keeping. The time is coming when the school keeper must leave the profession and give place to the true teacher.

With renewed physical energy from the long vacation both teachers and pupils ought to be able to do better work during the year on which they are about to enter than ever before. This ought to be the aim of every one and the writer believes it is, and that the work of the year will excel that of last year. May it be so all along the line.

The school work at the fair is very creditable to all our schools. It is some trouble to get everything arranged, and also a great deal of hard work connected with it, but the time required to prepare it by the pupils is well spent. The teachers ought never to complain of this work prepared, when they know the work prepared when they know that the preparations by the pupils is doing so much for them. Anyone attending the fair and listening to the comments of the pupils as they examine the work will be forced to the conclusion that they are greatly interested, and when children are interested they are on the road to success in learning. The teachers who can interest the pupils are the ones that are performing the true work of the teacher. First create an interest in the mind of the pupil, then attention is sure to follow, without which there is no success in study.

The condition of the street in front of the main building of the Ritchie school is bad enough to cause great dissatisfaction among those concerned, and the whole ward is concerned. When muddy weather comes it will be terrible as far as the mud is concerned. Where are those councilmen who promised to use their best endeavors to have the street paved in front of the building? The entire ward ought to protest against the condition of the street, and if there is another place in the city that has more need of a brick pavement than Wood street in front of the school building then the place is not known to the writer. The attention of the board of public works is called to this matter, and it is urged that it be remedied at once.

The Pedagogue during his vacation visited the southern part of West Virginia, spending several days each in Grenbrier, Mercer, McDowell, Logan and Mingo counties, and he must say he was in many respects surprised (agreeably so) at what he saw and found there. In the first place, it is a much richer country than he expected to find, and secondly, they are much further advanced educationally than one would suppose. Anyone who thinks that the people there are as odd as a great deal of the country is will find himself very much mistaken. He met while on his trip the leading teachers of the five counties, and all the teachers of three counties, and to say they compare very favorably with the teachers of the older and better developed counties of the state expresses just what he felt, after spending three weeks among them and testing them in many ways. McDowell county now ranks among the very richest of the state. It is wonderful how the coal and timber are being rushed into the market, and so it will be for years to come as along the Norfolk & Western railroad. It is now almost impossible to handle the freight, and in a very few years more outlet will be needed.

How the pupils did enjoy themselves at the fair! It was a great day for them. They all knew it was their day, and they were not slow to act in accordance with their knowledge. Well, we are only boys and girls once in our lives and why not enjoy those hazy days of youth as they pass? Next week these same boys and girls begin the year's work, and may success attend them in all their work.

And now, teachers, what will be our record for the year upon which we are just entering? Will we work for the good of the child or will we fall back into the "Gadgrind" style and work for per cents, as we have been doing for years and years gone by? We may think that the work of the teacher is to get high per cents from the pupils, but the time for the per cent teacher is about a thing of the past.
